Mouse pad with smart card

As we are referring to a pleasant meeting with Bjarke Gotfredsen and Jerry Nielsen regarding their mouse pad with a smart card reading unit, our evaluation and recommendation is as follows:

If the invention is new, we are pretty convinced that the invention can be patent/ utility model protected, since it has some advantages, which can not be considered to make it "obvious to a skilled professional in that industry".

In this connection we remark that we, not long ago, have achieved a utility model protection for a client, whose invention is in a related category as the present invention. This invention is presently being filed as a PCT application with the possibility of a patent. We are enclosing for your information a copy of this utility model text, which is publicly available.

We therefore recommend, that a patent application for the invention, possibly based on a preliminary novelty search, is filed as soon as possible.

If you have any questions and / or comments, you are of course welcome to contact us.

Meanwhile we will forward our invoice for the conducted work.

Best regards

Hofman-Bang
